ABSENCE makes the heart grow fonder

Cf. PROPERTIUS Elegies II. xxxiii^b. I. 43 semper in absentes felicior aestus amantes, passion [is] always warmer towards absent lovers.

□c 1850 in Isle of Beauty (rev. ed.) iii. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

1923 Observer 11 Feb. 9 These saws are constantly cutting one another's throats. How can you reconcile the statement that 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder' with 'Out of sight, out of mind'?

1979 Rose in Darkness xi. 'Oh, I couldn't go now!' 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder.'

1985 Dick & Jane 119 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder.' 'Some other organs, too. Like tha nose,' Nick cracked.

1992 Rather English Marriage (1993) xi. 178 Absence may have made his heart grow fonder, but it hasn't done wonders for mine.

There is no ACCOUNTING for tastes

It is impossible to explain why different people like different things (especially things that do not appeal to the speaker). Also now in the form there is no accounting for taste. The saying is a version of the Latin tag de gustibus non est disputandum, there is no disputing about tastes. Cf. 1599 J. MINSHEU Dialogues in Spanish 6 Against ones liking there is no disputing.

☐ 1794 Mysteries of Udolpho I. xi. I have often thought the people he disapproved were much more agreeable than those he admired;—but there is no accounting for tastes.

1889 Nether World II. viii. There is no accounting for tastes. Sidney .. not once .. congratulated himself on his good fortune.

1974 Porterhouse Blue x. ‘He was in the grip of Mrs Biggs.’.. ‘No accounting for tastes,’ said the Dean.

1985 Doubting Thomas iv. ‘You're usually in here with a little guy, wears a rug. Looks like he gets his suits from Sears. Paisley ties ... There's no accounting for taste.’

When ADAM delved and Eve span, who was then the gentleman?

The rhyme is particularly associated with the itinerant preacher John Ball, a leader of the 1381 'Peasants' Revolt', who used it to incite the people against their feudal lords.

□ c 1340 in Religious Pieces (EETS) 88 When Adam dalfe [dug] and Eue spane .. Whare was than the pride of man?

1381 in & Index Middle English Verse (1943) 628 Whan adam delffid and eve span, Who was than a gentilman?

AFTER dinner rest a while, after supper walk a mile

The sense turns on the fact that dinner is a heavy meal, while supper is a light one. The precept was current in medieval Latin: post prandium stabis, post coenam ambulabis, after luncheon you will stand still, after supper you will walk about.

□ 1582 Heptameron of Civil Discourses E3 After dynner, talke a while, After supper, walke a mile.

1584 Haven of Health ccxi. That olde English saying: After dinner sit a whyle, and after supper walke a myle.

1876 Cripps III. xvi. He neighed .. for he felt quite inclined for a little exercise ... ‘After supper, trot a mile.’

1979 Daily Telegraph 24 Dec. 3 ‘The physiological reaction to a heavy indigestible meal .. seems to be to sleep it off.’ What it all seems to boil down to is the old adage: After dinner rest a while, after supper walk a mile.

If ANYTHING can go wrong, it will

Commonly known as Murphy's Law, the saying has numerous variations. It is said to have been invented by George Nichols in 1949. Nichols was then a project manager working in California for the American firm of Northrop, and developed the maxim from a remark made by a colleague, Captain E. Murphy, of the Wright Field-Aircraft Laboratory. The contexts of the early quotations appear to support this explanation: 1955 Aviation Mechanics Bulletin May-June 11 Murphy's Law: If an aircraft part can be installed incorrectly, someone will install it that way.

□1956 Scientific American Apr. 166 Dr. Schaefer's observation confirms this department's sad experience that editors as well as laboratory workers are subject to Murphy's Laws, to wit: I. If something can go wrong it will, [etc.].

1958 Product Engineering 21 Apr. 32 If anything can go wrong with an experiment—it will.

1961 & Computer Programming Fundamentals viii. What we desire is the presentation of the information in .. an accurate and complete form ... Recalling 'Murphy's law'—'If something can go wrong or be misinterpreted, it will'—should be enough stimulus for the goals we desire.

1974 New York Times Magazine 8 Sept. 33 'If anything can go wrong, it will,' says Murphy's law. In this computer age, the 'law' has been helped along by clever con men.

1980 Midnight Men vii. Of course, the up train was delayed. There was some vast universal principle. If anything can go wrong it will.

An APE's an ape, a varlet's a varlet, though they be clad in silk or scarlet

A varlet was formerly a menial servant, but the word also took on the sense of 'scoundrel' or 'rogue'. Scarlet was the colour of the official or ceremonial dress of various dignitaries, including judges. Cf.

LUCIAN Adversus Indoctum 4 πῆθηκος ὁ πῆθηκος.. κἄνχρυσέα ἔχῃ σῦμβολα, an ape is an ape .. even if it has gold insignia; ERASMUS Adages I. vii. simia simia est, etiamsi aurea gestet insignia.

□1539 tr. Erasmus'Adages 21 An ape is an ape although she weare badges of golde.

1586 Praise of Music ii. You may cloath an Ape in golde, and an Infant in Hercules armour: doth an infant therfore chaunge his age, or an Ape forgoe his nature?

1659 Proverbs (English) I An Ape's an Ape, A Varlett's a Varlett, Though they be cladd in silk, or scarlett.

1732 Gnomologia no. 6391 An Ape's an Ape: a Varlet's a Varlet, Tho' they be clad in Silk or Scarlet.

The APPLE never falls far from the tree

Apparently of Eastern origin, it is frequently used to assert the continuity of family characteristics. Quot. 1839 implies return to one's original home. Cf. 16th-cent. Ger. der Apfel fällt nicht gerne weit vom Baume, the apple does not usually fall far from the tree.

□ 1839 Letter 22 Dec. (1939) II. 243 As men say the apple never falls far from the stem, I shall hope that another year will draw your eyes and steps to this old dear odious haunt of the race.

1939 Body, Boots & Britches xix. As a .. farmer remarked, 'If you breed a pa'tridge, you'll git a pa'tridge.' Another way of setting that truth forth is 'An apple never falls far from the tree.'

1981 Women's Journal Apr. 179 He's a fool, Muffie, as his father was. The apple never falls far from the tree.

An ARMY marches on its stomach

The proverb has been attributed to both Napoleon and Frederick the Great; this figurative use of (on one's) stomach is unusual in English.

ART is long and life is short

Hippocrates (Aphorisms I. I. ó βίος βραχύς ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρὴ life is short, but art is long) compared the difficulties encountered in learning the art of medicine or healing with the shortness of human life. Hippocrates' saying was alluded to by Seneca in his dialogue 'On the Brevity of Life' (De brevitae vitae I: vitam brevem esse, longam artem) and from this version the usual Latin form of the tag is derived: ars longa, vita brevis, art is long, life is short. Art is now commonly understood in the proverb in a less specific sense. In quot. 1958, it refers to (the durability of) a work of art.

BAD money drives out good

Commonly known as Gresham's Law, after Sir Thomas Gresham (c 1519–79), founder of the Royal Exchange. Gresham saw the economic need to restore the purity of the coinage, though there is no evidence that he actually used this expression. Quot. 1902 states that the principle, not the proverb, is mentioned in Gresham's letter to the Queen. (1858 H. D. The BIGGER they are, the harder they fall

Commonly attributed to the boxer Robert Fitzsimmons, prior to a fight c 1900 (see quot. 1902). (Come is sometimes used instead of are.) A similar form is however found in earlier related proverbs, such as:

1493 H. PARKER Dives & Pauper R7^V It is more synne in the man For the higher degre [position] the harder is the fal; 1670 J. RAY English Proverbs 102 The higher standing the lower fall. The idea can be traced back at least as far as the 4th-cent. AD Latin poet Claudian (In Rufinum I. 22 Tolluntur in altum Ut lapsu graviore ruant, men are raised on high in order that they may fall more heavily).

A BIRD in the hand is worth two in the bush

Parodied by the American actress Mae West (1892–1980) in the 1934 movie Belle of the Nineties: 'A man in the house is worth two in the street.' It is better to accept what one has than to try to get more and risk losing everything. Cf. 13th-cent. L. plus valet in manibus avis unica quam dupla silvis, one bird in the hands is worth more than two in the woods.

□ c 1450 Life of St. Katharine (EETS) II. iii. It is more sekyr [certain] a byrd in your fest, Than to haue three in the sky a-boue.

BRAVE men lived before Agamemnon

The exploits of Agamemnon, king of Mycenae, in the Trojan War were celebrated by Homer and by the tragic poets of ancient Greece. The point, made first by Horace, was that heroes need writers to commemorate them if they are to achieve eternal fame: HORACE Odes IV. ix. 25 vixere fortes ante Agamemnona multi, many brave men lived before Agamemnon. Cf. 1616 JONSON Forest VIII. 114 There were braue men, before Ajax or Idomen, or all the store That Homer brought to Troy.

It is good to make a BRIDGE of gold to a flying enemy

The rationale is ‘an enemy closely pursued may become desperate ... By all means, then, let the vanquished have a free course’ (T. Fielding Proverbs of all Nations (1824) 14). The idea is attributed to Aristides (480 BC), who warned Themistocles not to destroy the bridge of boats which Xerxes had built across the Hellespont in order to invade Greece (PLUTARCH Themistocles xvi). Cf. ERASMUS Apophthegms viii. Hostibus fugientibus pontem argenteum exstruendum esse, for a fleeing enemy one should construct a bridge of silver.

If CANDLEMAS day be sunny and bright, winter will have another flight; if Candlemas day be cloudy with rain, winter is gone, and won't come again

In the Church calendar, the feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary and the Presentation of Christ in the Temple falls on 2 February, which is known as Candlemas Day because candles are blessed at church services on that festival. In North America, 2 February is popularly known as Groundhog Day; the very similar weather prediction associated with it arises through the notion that if the groundhog emerges from its burrow on that day into bright sunlight and is frightened by its own shadow it will go back for a further six weeks' hibernation. The superstition was known from at least as early as the early sixteenth century: cf. 1523 SKELTON Works I. 418 *Men were wonte for to discern By candlemas day what wedder shulde holde. The CHURCH is an anvil which has worn out many hammers

The saying originated in the reply of the Calvinist theologian Theodore Beza (1519–1605) to the King of Navarre after the massacre of the Huguenots at Vassy in March 1562. The king had attempted to excuse the massacre on the grounds of the Protestants' having provoked the Duke of Guise and his followers by throwing stones at them.

□1853 Hist. Protestants of France I. II. v. 156 (tr. Beza to King of Navarre, 1562) It is the peculiarity of the Church of God .. to endure blows, not to give them; but yet you will be pleased to remember, that it is an anvil on which many a hammer has been broken.

From CLOGS to clogs is only three generations

Said to be a Lancashire proverb. Similar to from SHIRTSLEEVES to shirtsleeves in three generations. The clog, a shoe with a thick wooden sole, was commonly used by factory and other manual workers in the north of England. Cf. 1700 DRYDEN Wife of Bath in Fables Ancient & Modern 493 Seldom three descents continue good. 1721 J. KELLY Scottish Proverbs 312 The Father buys, the Son biggs [builds], The Grandchild sells, and his Son thiggs [begs].

□ 1871 Notes & Queries 4th Ser. VII. 472 'From clogs to clogs is only three generations.' A Lancashire proverb, implying that, however rich a poor man may eventually become, his great-grandson will certainly fall back to poverty and 'clogs'.

Let the COBBLER stick to his last

Attributed to the Greek painter Apelles (4th cent. BC.): see quot. 1721. The 'shoemaker' variant is a long-standing one in British proverb lore, but is now mainly North American. A last is a wooden or metal model on which a shoemaker fashions shoes or boots. Cf. PLINY Natural History xxxv. 85 ne supra crepidam sutor iudicaret, the cobbler should not judge beyond his shoe; ERASMUS Adages I. vi. 16 ne sutor ultra crepidam.

The DIFFICULT is done at once; the impossible takes a little longer

A version of this is well known as the slogan of the US Armed Forces: the difficult we do immediately; the impossible takes a little longer. The 'French Minister' to whom this saying is attributed in quot. 1873 is Charles Alexandre de Calonne (1734-1802), appointed finance minister by Louis XVI in 1783: si c'est possible, c'est fait; impossible? cela se fera, if a thing is possible, consider it done; the impossible? that will be done (quoted in J. Michelet Histoire de la Révolution Française (1847) I. ii. 8).

DIVIDE and rule

Government is more easily maintained if factions are set against each other, and not allowed to unite against the ruler. A common maxim (in Latin divide et impera, in German entzwei und gebiete), it should not (pace quot. 1732) be laid at the door of the Italian political philosopher Niccolò Machiavelli (1469–1527), who in fact denounced this principle. The DOG returns to its vomit

The expression is frequently found in various metaphorical and allusive forms, such as to return like a dog to his vomit, as illustrated below. EXPERIENCE is the best teacher

The Latin tag experientia docet, experience teaches, gave rise to a large number of proverbs. There is no standard form, and the sayings given below illustrate the themes that 'one learns (also, fools learn) by experience' and that 'experience is a hard teacher'. See also EXPERIENCE keeps a dear school.

□ a 1568 Schoolmaster (1570) I. 19 Erasmus .. saide wiselie that experience is the common scholehouse of foles.

The FAMILY that prays together stays together

The saying was invented by Al Scalpone, a professional commercial-writer, and was used as the slogan of the Roman Catholic Family Rosary Crusade by Father Patrick Peyton (P. Peyton, All for Her, 1967). The crusade began in 1942 and the slogan was apparently first broadcast on 6 Mar. 1947 during the radio programme Family Theater of the Air. The Crusade in Britain started in 1952, and the expression now has many (often humorous) variant forms.

- 1948 St. Joseph Mag. (Oregon) Apr. 3 'More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of', and 'The family that prays together stays together.' Such religious themes are hardly what one would expect to hear propounded over the air waves of our modern radio.

Where MACGREGOR sits is the head of the table

The proverb is sometimes attributed to Robert MacGregor of Campbell ('Rob Roy': 1671–1734), highland freebooter. Other names are used as well as MacGregor. The idea is explained in the two following quotes: 1580 LYLly Euphues & his England II. 39 When .. Agesilaus sonne was set at the lower end of the table, and one cast it in his teeth as a shame, he answered: this is the vpper end where I sit;

What MANCHESTER says today, the rest of England says tomorrow

The proverb occurs in a variety of forms. Quot. 1902 sets it in its historical context: the Corn Law, restricting the importation of foreign corn, was abolished in 1846, and Manchester (formerly part of Lancashire), considered the home of free trade, was in the forefront of the campaign against restrictive legislation.

POLITICS makes strange bedfellows

Politics has long been considered a plural noun; its use with a singular verb is comparatively recent. A well-established variant of ADVERSITY makes strange bedfellows.

□ 1839 Diary 9 July (1927) I. 404 Party politics, like poverty, bring men 'acquainted with strange bedfellows.'

1870 My Summer in Garden (1871) 187 The Doolittle raspberries have sprawled all over the strawberry-beds: so true is it that politics makes strange bed-fellows.

1936 Gone with Wind lviii. Ashley Wilkes and I are mainly responsible. Platitudinously but truly, politics make strange bedfellows.

1980 Dissident vii. Even enemies have something in common. Statecraft produces strange bedfellows.

1995 Washington Times 31 Mar. A4 Politics makes strange bedfellows, if Mr. Hyde will forgive the unforgivable but irresistible metaphor.

POSSESSION is nine points of the law

There is no specific legal ruling which supports this proverb—though the concept is widely acknowledged—but in early use the satisfaction of ten (sometimes twelve) points was commonly asserted to attest full entitlement or ownership. Possession, represented by nine (or eleven) points, is therefore the closest substitute for this. Cf. 1595 Edward III E3 Tis you are in possession of the Crowne, And thats the surest poynt of all the Law.

□ 1616 Adages 163 Possession is nine points in the Law.

Do not spoil the SHIP for a ha'porth of tar

Ship is a dialectal pronunciation of sheep, and the original literal sense of the proverb was 'do not allow sheep to die for the lack of a trifling amount of tar', tar being used to protect sores and wounds on sheep from flies. Hog (quots. 1623 and 1670) seems to have been understood by Ray (quot. 1670 note) as a swine, but it was also a widely used dialect term for a young sheep older than a lamb but before its first shearing. The current form of this proverb was standard by the mid-nineteenth century. The metaphorical phrase to spoil the ship for a ha'porth of tar is also found.

□ 1623 Remains concerning Britain (ed. 3) 265 A man will not lose a hog, for a halfeporth [halfpennyworth] of tarre.

1631 Advertisements for Planters XIII. 30 Rather .. lose ten sheepe, than be at the charge of halfe penny worth of Tarre.

SILENCE means consent

This is not a principle accepted in modern English law. However, Sir Thomas More (1478–1535) is said to have riposted with the Latin maxim when asked at his trial why he kept silent when asked to acknowledge the King's supremacy over the Church. Cf. L. qui tacet consentire videtur, he who is silent seems to consent.

From the SUBLIME to the ridiculous is only a step

In this form, from a remark made by Napoleon to the Polish ambassador De Pradt (D. G. De Pradt Histoire de l'Ambassade.. (1815) 215), following the retreat from Moscow in 1812: Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas, there is only one step from the sublime to the ridiculous. The idea, however, was not original to Napoleon: 1795 T. PAINE Age of Reason II. 20 The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related, that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime, makes the ridiculous; and one step above the ridiculous, makes the sublime again.

If at first you don't SUCCEED, try, try, try again

The short poem Try (try) again was often quoted in nineteenth-century children's literature, especially in the United States (see quot. 1840). It is popularly attributed to W. E. Hickson, who quoted it (with three try's) in his Moral Songs (1857) p. 8, but Palmer's use is earlier. The saying was soon used independently as a proverb.

Never give a SUCKER an even break

This saying has been attributed to various people, including E. F. Albee and W. C. Fields. It was popularized by Fields, who is said to have used it in the musical comedy Poppy (1923), though it does not occur in the libretto. Poppy was made into a silent film in 1925 and called Sally of the Sawdust. This was in turn remade as a 'talkie' in 1936 (see quot. 1936). The proverb means that one should not allow a fair chance to a fool, or one who may be easily deceived.
